

Research, Enterprise and International

The Academic Development Program offers an important opportunity for applicants to develop research trajectories, research projects and long term research ambition.

Research, Enterprise and International delivers the University's goals by

Being a partner of choice
Leveraging innovation and interdisciplinarity
Adopting challenge-led thinking
Catalysing creativity and entrepreneurship
Embracing a global outlook and sustainable future
Leading visionary scholarship and discovery

ADP supports these goals by awarding projects that:

Optimise Knowledge Translation	Grow Capability and Capacity (within the University, our region and with our partners)	Transform Global Perspective
Create Innovative Education Models	Develop Precincts and Platforms	Build Research Leadership

Central to these aims are equity and belonging. Applications are encouraged from academics with non-traditional career trajectories and those who have experienced career interruption, as well as from academics who have been impacted by COVID both personally and professionally. These interruptions are inclusive of academic staff who, in response to COVID, have focused on pastoral care roles for students and their colleagues and those whose workloads became more onerous as a result of COVID. Additionally, these interruptions include the impact on research continuity due to lockdowns.
